

One of the conditions that determines the validity of a study is the reliability of the examiner(s). Interrater reliability is:

- when two or more examiners record the same conditions the same way over time
- when two or more examiners view subjects in the same conditions the same way over time
- when one examiner records the same conditions the same way over time
- when one examiner views subjects in the same conditions the same way over time